

To our customers,

As awareness of the spread of COVID-19 increases, we would like to assure our clients that your health is our top priority.

COVID-19 is a coronavirus from a common family of viruses that usually cause respiratory illnesses in humans, and can be spread from person to person through direct contact.

Alberta Health Services has declared that the risk of exposure to COVID-19 is low.

We are doing everything we can do to follow the instructions given by our public health authorities. This includes:

- Focusing on the health of our clients and team by encouraging frequent hand washing
- Ensuring that high-touch surfaces are continuously sanitized throughout the day

If you see our team wiping down payment terminals, cash registers, countertops and door handles, please know this is an effort to reduce any risk. As the situation evolves, we may be implementing new measures to prevent the further spread of COVID-19.

We have action plans in place and we're committed to rapidly evolving our policies based on recommendations from global, national, and local health authorities to ensure we're doing everything we can to protect you and everyone else in Edmonton.
